Comments: I have lived in New Mexico my whole life. My childhood home looked out to the Sandias and my first memories of environmental stewardship and justice revolved around them. They are not an amusement park for the masses. They are a sacred example of mother nature's artistic abilities and an important cultural and spiritual place to those that have historically been removed from this land and are still living here today. Respect the indigenous peoples' right to protect this mountain.

I understand the proposed "coaster" will be on ski valley land that is already used for recreational use. That's not the point. The increased traffic this will bring, especially folks who are seeking the thrill of the "amusement park" and don't respect the land and care for the land is unimaginable.

Hard no.
