Comments: This project is an unnecessary blight on our already disappearing habitats. The Sandia Mountains contain four life zones and are home to the endemic Sandia Mountain alumroot. Beyond the environmental degradation that would certainly spawn from such an intensive project, this area is sacred to indigenous peoples. This ski resort is not only a slap in the face to environmentalists concerned with conservation of imperiled mountainous habitats and endemic species, but also to the overburdened indigenous population. Please reconsider allowing this project to move forward.
