Comments: I am writing as a concerned citizen is the U.S. and citizen of the globe. Putting a roller coaster in the middle of a forest (on ancestral Pueblo land) has got to be one of the dumbest things I've heard of. Why would you do that to the earth? What money hungry capitalist thought building a roller coaster in a forest would be a great idea? Who would it be a great idea for? Nature? Earth? The animals that live in that area? The Pueblo people that land should belong to? What kind of Forest Service would ever agree to this project? Why in the world would anyone believe tearing down forest area and putting up a roller coaster wouldn't need an environmental assessment.

It feels wild to be writing a letter against a roller coaster in the woods cause really, who would ever think this was a good idea? Feels like an episode of 'The Simpsons.' Please tell me this is a joke.
