Comments: This project should not continue. Building an attraction like this on stolen land that should be protected for its ecological importance will not benefit the community in the long-term. Climate change is obviously impacting the flora and fauna in the Cibola National Forest, just look at the increasing number of wildfires over the last decade. The money being used to build the roller coaster would be better spent on actions to mitigate the effects of climate change on the forest. The money could be used to pay Forest Service employees right now for doing something that will have lasting positive impacts on the survival of Cibola National Forest and all of its inhabitants, including humans.

Do not build this roller coaster. It will only exacerbate an imminent and real threat to our livelihood. We must protect and manage our forests, not use them as a means to an end.
