Comments: I live in Bellingham and make it to the Mt Baker area as often as physically possible. It's the most amazing place I've ever been and logging is going to ruin its natural beauty for so many people who love it there. It's sad that this is even a discussion right now. If you cut down all the trees then you have to think about all the animals and species you are ruining their home. This area is one of the most prominent places to mushroom hunt. Once you ruin all the fungi that is there and helping clean up our forest you will realize surrounding forest won't thrive like they use to. I hate living in such a beautiful place to constantly having to convince people why cutting down all the trees is wrong? Do these people not enjoy the beautiful outdoors? And what Washington is to all of us who venture outdoors into the forest? So sad to not even care about the things you might not be able to see with your own eyes but they're there.
