Comments: Frankly, after the loss of 28 ? horses from this herd - and the harassment of the herd itself - I wouldn't think there would be any reason to remove any more. But as to the number of cattle grazing in this "wild horse territory"- there sure isn't any question as to why there wouldn't be enough forage for a few wild horses. The Forest Service has not done their job in managing this herd, has not investigated who has been killing wild horses - has not followed up on these crimes in any way. So NOW we must remove the animals from their own territory! I believe it's past time to shut down livestock grazing allotments. As a taxpayer, I'm tired of having to subsidize livestock operators on our public lands and forests. Let's remove cattle for a change - they are responsible for the destruction.
