Comments: These wild horses should be protected by the National Forests. They are already protected by the federal. This 20,000 acres can hold both the horses and cattle. The horses should be getting the same grazing time/area as the cattle. They are just as important. If some have to be removed it should be by live bait and then placed for adoption.

If the population needs to be done IUDs are not the answer. These methods can become in humane if infection sets in or complications other than infections occur. They will not be medically monitored and horses will suffer. This is not how nature works. These horses don't deserve to be destroyed by the acts of man. They can be terrified like any breathing soul. Let's think of the horses.

Thank you,
Cindy Liles
