Comments: My family history in Arizona dates back to the 1880s. Wild horses were vital to the early settlers of Arizona. This makes wild horses back then and now very much an important part of the heritage of this country and therefore deserve to be treated humanely. I find it appalling that existing Government policies often endorse or facilitate the brutalizing of wild horses and thus decimating their wild populations so private and commercial interests such as cattle can graze the public lands where they live. Inhumane and ineffective herd management often lead to slaughter because the cost of rounding up and incarcerating so many wild horses quickly becomes untenable. The planned Heber wild horses roundup and removal should not be tolerated!
