Comments: I look at things impartially and am not on one side or the other. I understand the need for ranchers to have their livestock graze, etc.. After looking at the sizes of the horse herds and their populations over the last few decades, the claim that they are overpopulating and over grazing just doesn't seem to be accurate. We must keep our existing horses free and alive, once they are gone they will be gone forever. We cannot continue destroying our wild horses or the areas they live in. Look at Australia and their Tasmanian Tiger (Thylacine) and what almost happened to our bison. I am not a tree hugger, as a matter of fact I am far from it but this idea of culling or removing our wild horses from this area is not a good idea and the evidence does not support the claims of ranchers or big business that are pushing for this to happen. Like with most things..... follow the money. Let the horses continue to live and be free so that our future generations can also enjoy them.
