Comments: As a citizen who highly values our national treasures, both living (bison, mustangs, eagles, butterflies, etc.) and non-living (national parks, monuments and forests, wild areas on all states, etc.) I implore all decisionmakers who have say over these treasures to implement every resource in their preservation, not only for me and my descendants, but for all the world. It is not in our purview to decide the fate of creation in consideration of other than moral reasoning, but to act in every way as stewards to preserve every bit of creation. Earth is our home and we must keep it intact. Eliminating mustangs and wild equines does not forward preservation but diminishes our diversity, breaking the web of life. Think carefully before you kill any species; a price will ultimately be paid by all of us.
