Comments: I am 70 years old and have seen mostly bad grazing practices in my public lands excursions.

Vegetation and water courses are always degraded and at higher altitude and with climate change these areas cannot recover. I encourage you to eliminate all allotments, especially at higher elevations. Families should not be allowed to pass on their permits and a much higher fee should be charged for any grazing. The federal land managers have a responsibility to stop this practice and use our public lands for long term sustainability and fire management.
