Comments: I worked on a range crew for the Challis N.F. back in '79 & '80, and worked on ranches in the area afterwards. Our projects included fencing some of the last open range into "manageable" parcels, so the leasee could increase AUMs. We are now just beginning to experience the effects of climate change, with drought in much of the western states grazing areas. Public lands grazing needs to be seriously reduced or stopped to preserve habitat for native species. To do otherwise would gain us nothing but shame from future generations.
