Comments: Grazing rights of domestic livestock on public lands needs a very thorough review and modification. At a time when much of wildlife is threatened by climate change and potential extinction, this grazing needs to be substantially cut back and in many areas eliminated. Particularly requiring elimination is the grandfathering of such rights to future generations of farmers. Being a livestock farmer, I recognize that the pandemic has impacted us, but continuing these grazing rights, particularly at their current level is a threat to the native wildlife and the ecosystems of their habitats. Make changes with this in mind prior to initiating any action.
