Comments: The question that should be posed before these actions are considered is why anyone deems deforestation necessary for grazing lands. It can only be answered by realizing past mismanagement of previous grazing sites has caused any consideration of developing more. The planet is not an infinite supply of land. The land already in use must be cultivated properly and no other lands should be spoiled. Deforestation is not the answer. Proper care of lands already designated for grazing is. As the planet is being constantly depleted of natural resources, we are putting ourselves and future generations of humans and wildlife at greater risk. Please take responsibility for the errors of the past and do not proceed with these draconian ideas.
