Comments: The idea of grazing in a wilderness area is against the reasons a wilderness area was set aside. Grazing by domestic animals will destroy wilderness areas as they trample and rip out existing plant life which has been deemed important enough to be called wilderness.

In National Forests, the same problems exist and there is no reason one owner should be allowed to ruin wonderful tourist destinations by overgrazing, which is the reason that the requests are constantly made to extend grazing in public lands. The owners of domestic animals are not maintaining their grazing lands properly.

Please do not allow grazing on any public lands.
