Comments: I am concerned about the Forest Service's plans to change grazing rules on Wilderness lands and allow domestic animals to endanger protected public lands and the wildlife that is supported there.

This initiative is leftover from the previous administration's proposal to increase grazing. It would not only fuel livestock grazing's contribution to the climate and biodiversity crises, but runs directly counter to the Biden administration's 30x30 land conservation agenda by sacrificing what could be protected lands to the commercial livestock industry.

This should not be occurring. Wilderness is in very short supply, and needs to be stewarded for the future of this nation and its increasing number of citizens. Please reconsider this proposal with your best intentions toward preserving our wilderness heritage.
