

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 4/16/2021 10:19:10 PM

First name: Dennis

Last name: Parker

Organization:

Title:

Comments: We lived for several years on property with a natural river running through the property located adjacent to the Carson National Forest in Northern New Mexico that allowed permitted grazing. The damage the cattle did to the forest and the river frontage was horrific.

There should be NO livestock grazing on any federal forest or wilderness areas. The fees are so unrealistic in their low charge that the ranchers use the tax payers resources without ever having to repay anything for the damage they incur.

Basically, the Forest Service does nothing to address this constant issue.