Comments: Re: Proposed Rangeland Management Directives:

1. Cattle grazing should not be permitted on national forest lands and least of all on designated wilderness land anywhere in the United States.
2. In addition to destructive impacts on vegetation, wildlife, water and the land itself, cattle contribute significantly to global warming by their emission of methane, a greenhouse gas.
3. Where land is suitable for grazing (which does not violate # 1. or # 2. above) (e.g. prairie rangeland) , those owning and controlling cattle should pay per acre prices equal to grazing costs for use of private lands.
