Comments: I have seen the damage that cattle can do to our wilderness areas. I have seen the muddy hoof prints all over the edges of ponds and creeks and wetlands. And seen the filthy water, undrinkable. I have seen the smashed wildflowers and the degraded meadows. Enough, I say.

The Rangeland Management Directives have the potential to significantly affect millions of acres of public land, including Wilderness, where livestock grazing is fundamentally at odds with the mandate of the Wilderness Act that Wilderness remain "untrammled."

Livestock grazing on National Forests, including millions of acres of Wilderness, significantly degrades our public lands. Impacts from grazing must be fully examined and addressed through a transparent, public process that complies with federal laws, including the National Environmental Policy Act.

Please do the right thing for Wilderness, other public lands, and wildlife by dropping the proposed Rangeland Management Directives.
