Comments: I am writing to you about possibly expanding the areas in which stock are allowed to graze on our public lands. Much of this land is wilderness area, and should be protected so that wildlife can live and thrive there. Allowing cattle and sheep to graze on these lands really degrades the land for wildlife. Since these are "public" lands, they should be preserved for all Americans to use for recreation and enjoyment, not for ranchers to make a profit by grazing their livestock on these lands. Livestock production and habitat degradation are exacerbating climate change, which is hurting everyone. I really think these public lands to be protected and preserved for wildlife and for recreation, not to be used for grazing livestock, which are destroying these wilderness areas. Please, no more grazing on these lands!
