Comments: Do not degrade wilderness for the sake of grazing livestock that will compete with wild animals for food and nutrition often beyond what these ecosystems can sustain, especially in times of drought. Global warming makes severe weather conditions and wildfires hard enough on these lands without adding the burden of grazing livestock.

Also once ranchers are allowed to use these lands it does not take long for these same people to consider grazing on wilderness lands or even overgrazing as a god given right instead of as a privilege extended to them by the U.S. tax payers.
