The Forest Service must do the right thing for Wilderness, other public lands, and wildlife by dropping its proposed Rangeland Management Directives.

Thus the Forest Service must develop policies that ensure the agency will maintain authority for grazing management decisions and insist that grazing permit holders be made accountable for the impacts their livestock has on public lands.

Livestock grazing on National Forests, including millions of acres of Wilderness, significantly degrades our public lands. Impacts from grazing must be fully examined and addressed through a transparent, public process that complies with federal laws, including the National Environmental Policy Act.
