Comments: I understand that grazing and mining in Wilderness Areas were gifts to commercial interests in order to pass the Wilderness Act of 1964. It is a shame that such activities that clearly go against the basic idea of Wilderness were ever allowed. Now that we better understand the detrimental effects of cattle grazing on pristine lands, it is time to re-evaluate this give-away. Like fossil fuels, meat-eating and milk-drinking are diminishing at a rapid pace - and, for good reason, since neither are environmentally sustainable, healthy, or essential. Cattle grazing in Wilderness areas is a Neanderthal dream.
