

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 4/17/2021 10:57:45 AM

First name: Sally

Last name: Magaziner

Organization:

Title:

Comments: National Forests should be protecting just what their title implies - protecting the indigenous and natural wildlife that is a part of that local ecosystem. Wildlife is threatened enough everywhere and National Forests should focus on protecting wildlife, and not expanding any land for livestock grazing. We have beautiful natural diverse land and wildlife in our country but sadly it's not so vast and plentiful anymore, much of it has become seriously threatened and endangered due to the destruction of our natural land. Please put a halt to any further expansion of grazing land in our national forests. Protect our parks and wildlife and the natural flora. One needs the other to survive and our country must National Forests should be protecting just what their title implies - protecting the indigenous and natural wildlife that is a part of that local ecosystem. Wildlife is threatened enough everywhere and National Forests should focus on protecting wildlife, and not expanding any land for livestock grazing. We have beautiful natural diverse land and wildlife in our country but sadly it's not so vast and plentiful anymore, much of it has become seriously threatened and endangered due to the destruction of our natural land. Please put a halt to any further expansion of grazing land in our national forests. Protect our parks and wildlife and the natural flora. One needs the other to survive and our country must honor its role of stewardship to the small proportion of natural forest that remains in what was once an expansive and magnificent land... and do our country proud! Once it's gone it's gone and heaven knows we've already been disrespectful, destructive and wasteful enough as it is.