Comments: Dear sirs,

I am in opposition of any expansion of livestock in national forests and wilderness areas. This practice has proven to be in direct conflict of protecting the land and its natural inhabitants. Most tax payers are against this practice and it only benefits a select few in the livestock industries. In my opinion, these unique places should be preserved in their natural states for your and my future generations. Enough is enough of this destructive practice. I urge the Forest Service to begin to implement practices that benefit these wild places and their natural inhabitants, please!

Thank you, Julie *****
