Comments: Please do everything in your power to oppose livestock grazing in public lands.

Anyone that is paying attention should be hearing the cries of a planet in distress. We are over fertilizing, overspraying pesticides, over polluting plastics and exhaust, and taking too much from the natural ecosystems.

Ecosystems are the basis of sustainable life on this planet. They provide air, water, and arable soil. Continuing to tamper with and appropriate the wild for industry is very clearly and obviously shooting ourselves in the foot as a species.

Humanity is collectively evolving, out of a very real necessity, away from dairy and factory farmed animal meat. As you make managerial decisions about the use of public lands, I would like to offer my most sincere encouragement to aide in this transformation, for the sake of health, prosperity, children, and future generations.
