Comments: Please leave these beautiful animals alone. They have been roaming those lands for many decades and have flourished there. It isn't fair or humane to hunt them, round them up (forcibly), and move them to a different location just so people with cattle and other large animals can have the land for their own purposes. I can't understand why anyone would want to change and hurt these horses in any way. These are living breathing beings that go about their life similar to humans, but in a different environment. They are born, grow up with their mothers and/or herd, live off the land, mate and have their own babies (foals), and the cycle continues. They are not harmful to anyone and are a beautiful, historical part of the land there. When I think of the "West", I think of those beautiful, majestic animals that roam free and wild. Why can't humans find a way to work with all the animals in the area instead of trying to get rid of the ones that have lived there for generations? These animals deserve to be honored and respected, so please leave them to live out their lives the way it has always been intended.
