

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 4/21/2021 3:37:42 AM

First name: D

Last name: Sutherland

Organization:

Title:

Comments: The Heber herd and wild burros have lived in these lands peacefully for decades. The only nuisance is humans. Cows do not belong in the forest. They are not native. These horses, however, are native and should be permitted to live peacefully and without the ridiculous interventions, all cruel, which are in the works of being proposed.

It is time these animals are not only left alone, but also protected. The only fixing that needs to be done is with the land management and ranchers who selfishly want to exterminate these horses for good. There is no overpopulation problem just as there is no ravaging of the lands by these animals. Ranchers and behind the scenes negotiations with state land management IS the issue. Stop harassing these animals! They are right where they need to be.