Comments: The land cannot protect itself against vehicles, parking lots, public bathrooms, deliberately constructed trails, and the careless, mindless behavior of some humans; we must provide that protection - wherever and whenever possible.

I first saw Tamolitch Pool in 1990. Like most people, I was stunned by its beauty, grateful for its existence and near-inaccessibility.

There should be no swimming in Tamolitch Pool; indeed, there should be no "direct" access to it - certainly no texts/maps/guides that lead people to it.
