Comments: The Federal Government and its branches and agencies actually have the potential to influence markets and manufacturing and manufacturers. Be the California. I refer to California's emissions standards which are generally recognized to be stricter than national ones.

Uphold and adhere to the existing Siuslaw National Forest standards. If those standards are out-of-line with other Oregon rules (which I read in an earlier version of the article in the Register-Guard at https://www.registerguard.com/story/news/2021/06/01/officials-consider-relaxing-noise-restrictions-oregon-dunes/7493781002/) I think you should expect the rest of Oregon rules to catch up to you. And advocate for that.

Approximately 13% of the U.S. population over the age of 12 have hearing loss. Loud noises make people's condition worse temporarily and longterm. We as individuals can control many episodes of exposure to loud noise with hearing protection or . . . just never going anywhere near the Oregon Dunes?! So other people can abuse them while consuming petroleum products just for "fun"?!?

Please, do not relax the restrictions.
