Comments: I love the idea of regulating tourist use of the Mendenhall Glacier Visitor's Center to better protect wildlife so I think what you propose is better than nothing, but I have a few questions.

1. Is the cost of the permit the same for large bus companies transporting 50 people several times a day the same as the cost for a taxi transporting 4 people several times a day? It seems like the cost should increase with the number of people using.

2. Can there be something added to reflect that permit fees for the Visitor's Center go directly toward protecting wildlife at the Visitor's Center? I don't see anything about how this extra money will be used to the benefit the visitors Center as opposed to being put in a general type fund and used for something completely unrelated.
