Comments: the patagonia mountains support endangered species...habitat for countless creatures and a place for humans to experience this home we call earth in the most elemental of ways. to destroy and decimate the land that the mining companies want to use for their profits just feels profoundly wrong. this is pristine wilderness. we cannot keep blowing up the earth and discarding toxins all along the way and expect to continue to have a livable home enriched by the natural world. some of these areas are also home to indigenous tribal peoples who hold them as sacred. it is well known that mining scars have a forever imprint. water is fouled, earth is gouged and poisoned...it is all a travesty. do not let this (continue) to happen.
