Comments: For ten years, I have been a user of public lands around Patagonia, Arizona. Forest lands traditionally used by me, friends, and family for hiking and hunting have now been disrupted by mining activity conducted by foreign mining companies. I oppose the sale of the proposed U.S. forest lands to such companies. Their operations threaten my way of life, endanger plants and animals, and put at risk the water supplies that support our rural neighbors and local wildlife. The noise pollution alone is horrendous. I am firmly opposed to the sake of these tracts.
