Comments: We are fortunate to be in an age where s have access to information about our natural world. Our forests give us life. I would like to encourage those who have been given the privilege of caring for our national forests to carefully consider the best options of working with nature. It is a force of life that sustains humans and all other types of life. It is larger than us..

After looking into the options and opinions available to me, it appears that cutting and burning as a way to mitigate fire danger works against the natural life of the forest. I enjoy the products made from wood in my home and in the construction of buildings that sustain my life. It is my hope that we can obtain wood from the forest in ways that honor and sustains the natural life of the forest..

Thank you for your time and thoughtful consideration in this matter.
