Comments: Hello,

Thanks for your work on this project. As an avid mountain biker, xc-skier, regenerative farmer, agro-ecologist, agroforester, backcountry adventurer, and entrepreneur, I am generally supportive of inclusive shared use of the backcountry that supports both individual rights, but ultimately the care and preservation on our forests! I'm quite willing to table my desires for more trails, where opening up the wilderness is inappropriate or deleterious! This is an even more essential imperative where extractive practices, such as oil, gas, and timber, are concerned! Keep roadless areas, roadless!

Ultimately, both the USFS and BLM will need to embrace more ecological practices for land and watershed management that infuse organic matter back into living forest and rangeland soils, rather than the depleting extractive practices currently employed! This means employing Holistically Managed livestock (cattle, sheep, and goats...) as well as more of a chop and drop strategy for dead timbers, potentially inoculated with fungal spores for more rapid and comprehensive decomposition! Healthy forest and healthy rangelands require healthy soils!!

Thanks,

Antonio Marxuach
