Comments: I recognize how challenging the writing of a Project report such as this can be. However, the existence of challenges is no excuse for the sloppy handling of the content of the report. While all parts of our forests are subject to the hazards of fires and even the risk of falling trees, those areas of the forest that are designated "wilderness" should be recognized by the general public as well as governmental entities as places where risks of falling trees are NOTICED but not "removed"; devastation from past calamities and NATURAL regeneration can be seen just as as they could have been seen before Europeans got here; and obstructions to hiking trails and other access ways are cleared without engaging in the use of noisy, environmentally polluting means like chain saws. Make certain the proposed project report does NOT digress into sloppy wordsmanship when it comes to protecting all aspects of the people's wilderness areas.
