

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 11/12/2021 9:58:54 PM

First name: Marc

Last name: Fleisher

Organization:

Title:

Comments: I don't know why but it seems pretty obvious to me that Wilderness means, well, Wilderness.

Chainsaws have no place in a Wilderness. Dead and dying trees serve a purpose in a Wilderness. Leave them alone; they are a part of the ecosystem. If you really feel you have to cut trees, cut the ones that are absolutely in the way. And get a little sweaty doing it, with crosscut saws.

Visitors to the Wilderness can experience nature on its own terms. They don't need the Forest Service to tidy things up for them. Leave the Wilderness the hell alone. It just takes a little thought. Fooling around with the Wilderness is not what the Forest Service is about.