Comments: I have read of the removal of trees, alive and dead, and I oppose this idea. The areas where this would happen are unclear and there are many that should not be touched. I can not imagine why this would be necessary as it will not have any effect on the safety of the forests regarding wildfires. Live trees provide clean air and habitat and dead trees feed the soil and serve wildlife including insects in many ways. When people go into nature they want to see just that-nature-not pristine land that has been pruned and they should be able to experience forests in all phases whether they have experienced fires or not. Nature works quite well if left alone so please do that and leave the cutting and chainsaws out.
