

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 11/13/2021 12:33:32 PM

First name: Linda

Last name: Iannuzzi

Organization:

Title:

Comments: I absolutely OPPOSE removing trees that have been burned in wildfires. Once logging companies get a green light, they will take anything with a hint of char on it, destroying "burned" trees that would otherwise recover - including the giant sequoias and redwoods that have survived for thousands of years. There would be financial incentives to destroy, but no incentive to protect and allow for recovery. After seeing trees chopped down, and how hard the tree will try to come back from the root system, I TRULY believe that most burned trees will come back, given enough recovery time. This is simply an attempt by lumber companies to gain advantage when the forests are temporarily damaged. STOP THIS.