Comments: The invaluable natural habitat is self containing in so many ways, removing even part of it, when there has been so much disruption to the natural environment, world-wide, means there is no where else for creatures, living in this habitat to go.

Humans must reuse the areas we've already started to cultivate.

We MUST draw a line between humans and unspoiled nature. If we don't we will destroy all of nature and, in return, destroy so much for our children. (Not future generations, our children, now)
