Comments: In regards to materials intended to be collected through source sites as indicated on the location map I wonder if any consideration has been given to collecting such materials, if truly needed, in the areas of the Coronado Forest which have already been greatly disturbed by the now defunct Border Wall? I would think after viewing this area myself, such materials already are readily available. Why disturb unnecessary additional areas if material source sites can be relocated to take advantage of what has been already brought to the surface. Blasting and deforestation have certainly created obtainable sources of materials. Thank you.
