I am against on these grounds: the management at Lutsen is disingenuous. At one time the Lutsen was pumping water from the Poplar River over the allowable amount on there permit. When requested by the DNR to desist, Lutsen refused. Lutsen went to to the House of Representatives and eventually the DNR caved.

Allowing Lutsen to expand is like allowing cancer to grow. Early and aggressive actions is needed to survive cancer in most cases. As Lutsen expands, it will need an increasing amount of land. As it expands, there is a growing economic dependence on the business expansion putting more pressure on the DNR.

The management at Lutsen needs to learn to live within their means.
