Comments: I think the forests should be CLEANED UP FIRST before you do control burning. Control burns have a bad track record of getting out of control burning homes and structures that weren't part of the original control burn plan. Clean the forests up and then we can re-visit lighting the forests on fire in a control burn. The winds are unpredictable, turn on a dime and when winds shift, "control burn" plans go up in smoke, so to speak. Plus government officials, like Newsom, should seriously think about selling his vineyards and build an Academy of Fire Science on that property which is long overdue. Training fire fighters in the latest high tech methods, attracting more fire fighters who will be professionally trained and equipped is a good idea. With all of the damage, grief, loss, pain and suffering that he is responsible for under his watch, it's the least he can do. Arsonists under his administration are most likely responsible for the years of summer fires rather than the boogie man "climate change". When, in the history of recorded weather history, has the "climate" never changed? Never. Always changes. Stop doing the same thing over and over again with less than excellent results, expecting a different result. Think outside the box. Hold the elected officials for their Failed fire policies.
