Comments: Active stewardship of our forests is vitally important. Leaving messes where they lie is what spoiled children do.

Please listen to what the trust fund 'activists' say, and then realize that they are not thinking in a rational manner, but rather, regurgitating emotionally charged rhetoric that fails to stand up to any scrutiny.

They are especially not thinking of the future when the spoil and dangerous trees have rotted and become more of a danger and almost impossible to remove safely.

That detritus will feed the next fire that sweeps through and allow it to burn too hot and slow for the trees to survive. Fast moving fires revitalize the forest. Slow burning fires consume the forest and take a century or more to recover from.

Let's clean this area up and make it available to our children and their children, rather than locking it away from future generations because a few people have the money to hire lawyers and make it so difficult to accomplish anything, that nothing gets done.
