Comments: I firmly believe we must protect our precious wilderness, and the "wilderness experience" to the maximum possible extent...but not at the risk of allowing special harms, such as a volcanic eruption, to cause preventable loss of life outside that wilderness. These monitoring upgrades make a lot of sense, and once installed, will not inhibit the sanctity of this area one iota.

We should sensibly balance the risks here, and "split the baby". Perhaps the wilderness advocates could offer to pack in most of the needed materials, wherever that IS possible, and not object to the use of helicopters where there is no practical alternative.
