Comments: I applaud the effort to build a trail out of Redstone and to the top of McClure Pass, using historical roadways. It has been a hundred years since a person or animal has been able to walk gracefully out of the Crystal Valley. I urge that we utilize alignments that provides dignity, safety and separation from the auto and truck traffic. It is obvious that any trail within the noise zone of the roadway and human habitat-ed areas will not increase the impact to wildlife because the noise and human disturbance is already repelling the fauna. Any non-threatening interactions has the potential to actually improve animal human relations.
