Comments: I support this trail on the basis that it does impact the wildlife or require a dramatic change of the landscape from the road. The idea that families, visitors and locals could enjoy an out and back like this from Redstone is pretty unique. I can imagine the trail would be well used. One concern I would have is for road cyclists who would not be using an unpaved trail. As someone who spends more time in that area on a road bike climbing the pass leaving from Carbondale, I would hope this trail would not encourage aggression from drivers wanting all cyclists to use the trail. In 20+ years of riding 133 I have yet to experience any issues. Thank you for your consideration of public comments.
