Comments: I applaud your attempts to get this right per scientific knowledge.

In general, I would like to see more decommissioned roads, perhaps around 30 miles of them. Then, closed roads should be about 40 or 50 miles of them. As for danger trees, very few are really dangerous, and their root systems are very valuable. So, many could be topped rather than removed. This would prevent erosion and hopefully some would still live. It would also mean they could grow closer to roads, as falling would still not reach the road.
