

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 3/20/2022 3:06:52 AM

First name: Joel and Laine

Last name: Schipper

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Hi - we are not forest experts, but we do hike and walk in these woods, and take great pleasure in the big old trees here. We do know that bigger trees store a disproportional amount of carbon ... you can NOT replace this with stands of new, young trees.

Given that the U.N. Has already reported - and recently - that we are just about TOO LATE to reverse climate damage that will permanently harm us, we believe it is imperative that you, the USFS, take climate changes into consideration when looking at where to harvest timber. This particular wildness does NOT seem to be suitable for harvesting.

Thank you for listening.

We are members of BARK.