Comments: Just wanted to express my desire to see all currently open snowmobile areas remain open at this time. Areas are being closed across CA including over 70% of the rideable terrain on the Stanislaus National Forest. Due to climate change, more and more lower elevation areas are becoming unrideable and even the higher elevation areas have only been rideable all season two of the past 10 years. Threat of lawsuits from environmental groups shouldn't dictate policy. As we all know, human-powered recreationalists can access 100% of National Forest System Land and the areas that snowmobilers can access areas that actually get reliable and deep enough snow consists of less than 10% of Inyo Lands. Please keep existing areas open!
